

Financial Guidance for Professionals in Sport

Whether you have just started in the glamorous and potentially highly rewarding world of professional sport, or you are an established and leading performer, some things are already pretty certain – to succeed in your sport you need commitment, skill and planning.

You will continue to need these to secure your lifestyle when your competitive career is over; and there is one other the honest advice of an experienced and trusted adviser.

Brown Shipley has been guiding professionals in sport for many years. The service is strictly personal and private, a specialist service which recognises that each client has individual circumstances and requirements. We believe that having someone you can really trust and contact whenever you need to is both important and comforting.

We are not agents. As professional advisers we guide you through the strategies which can ensure your planning is spot on. The financial world out there can be a confusing one, so we don't make silly promises or tempt you with 'too good to be true' schemes for that is often just what they are!

At Brown Shipley, we're also conscious that as your career progresses, your needs and aspirations will change. Successful planning is necessary therefore to manage your lifestyle through the different stages, right through to the end of your playing days and beyond.
